CONTENTS

PART I
A DESCRIPTIVE VIEW ON ENGLISH SYNTAX 13

Chapter 1 Types of Syntactic Analysis 15
1.1 The components of language 15
1.2. Linguistic knowledge (competence) and performance. 16
1.2.1. Linguistic knowledge (competence) 16
1.2.2. Linguistic performance 17
1.3. Kinds of syntactic analysis 18
1.3.1. Descriptive grammar 18
1.3.2. Bloomfieldian structural linguistics 19
1.3.3. The post-Bloomfieldian school: the structuralist approach 20
1.3.4. 'Deep' syntax 22
1.3.4.1. Tagmemic theory 22
1.3.4.2. Scale and category grammar 23
1.3.4.3. Stratificational grammar 24
1.3.4.4. Case grammar 25
1.3.5. Generative-Transformational Grammar 27
1.3.5.1. Noam Chomsky's contribution 27
1.3.5.2. X-bar syntax 31
1.3.5.3. The Minimalist Programme 35
1.3.6. Functional/Systemic Grammar 37
1.3.7. Universal Grammar 37

Chapter 2 The Classification of Sentences 42
2.1. Classification in point of trend or purpose of the communication 42
2.2. Classification in point of structure (of the communication)/ of composition 44
2.3. Classification in point of status or grammatical dependence 44

Chapter 3 The Compound Sentence 48
3.1. Copulative coordination 48
3.2. Disjunctive coordination 52
3.3. Adversative coordination 53
3.4. Consecutive (resultative) coordination 54
3.5. Causal (explanatory) coordination 54

Chapter 4 The Complex Sentence 55
4.1 Subordination. Characteristics of Subordinate Clauses 55
4.2. Formal Indicators of Subordination 57
4.3. Classifications of Subordinate Clauses 58
4.3.1. Structural classification 58
4.3.2. Functional classification 59

Chapter 5 Nominal Clauses 61
5.1. The Subject Clause 61
5.1.1. Introductory elements 61
5.1.2. The position of subject clauses 62
5.1.3. Classes of words that trigger a Subject Clause 63
5.1.4. Constraints upon the moods and tenses in Subject Clauses 64
5.1.5. Non-finite forms 67
5.1.6. Subject That Clauses across registers 68
5.2. The Predicative Clause 68
5.2.1. Introductory elements 69
5.2.2. The position of Predicative Clauses 69
5.2.3. Classes of words that trigger a Predicative Clause 69
5.2.4. Sequence of tenses in Predicative Clauses 70
5.2.5. Non-finite forms 70
5.2.6. Predicative Clauses across registers 70
5.3. The Object Clause 71
5.3.1. The Direct Object Clause 71
5.3.1.1. Introductory elements 71
5.3.1.2. The position of the Direct Object Clause 75

5.3.1.3. Classes of words that trigger a DO clause 75
5.3.1.4. Constraints upon the moods and tenses in Direct Object Clauses 75
5.3.1.5. Non-finite forms 79
5.3.1.6. That Clauses across registers 80
5.3.2. The Indirect Object Clause 82
5.3.3. The Prepositional Object Clause 82
5.3.3.1. Introductory elements 82
5.3.3.2. The deletion of the preposition 83
5.3.3.3. Sequence of tenses in Prepositional Object Clause 83
5.3.3.4. Non-finite forms 85

Chapter 6 Relative/Attributive Clauses 86
6.1. Restrictive/Defining Relative Clauses 86
6.1.1. Introductory elements 86
6.1.2. Transformations involving Restrictive Relative Clauses . 92
6.1.3. Sequence of tenses in Restrictive Relative Clauses 94
6.2. Non-Restrictive/Descriptive Relative Clauses 94
6.2.1. Introductory elements 95
6.2.2. Sentential Relative Clauses 96
6.3. Appositive Relative Clauses 96
6.3.1. Introductory elements 96
6.3.2. Mood constraints 97
6.3.3. Non-finite forms 97
6.3.4. Introductory emphatic sentences 97
6.4. Relative Attributive Clauses across registers 99

Chapter 7 Adverbial Clauses 100
7.1. General characteristics 100
7.2. The Adverbial Clause of Time 101
7.2.1. Introductory elements 101
7.2.2. The Position of finite Time Clauses 102
7.2.3. Sequence of Tenses in Time Clauses 103

7.2.4. Non-finite forms 106
7.2.5. Non-finite forms 108
7.3. The Adverbial Clause of Place 110
7.3.1. Introductory elements 110
7.3.2. Sequence of Tenses in Adverbial Clauses of Place 110
7.3.3. Non-finite forms 111
7.4. The Adverbial Clause of Manner 111
7.4.1.The Adverbial Clause of Manner Proper 111
7.4.1.1. Introductory elements 111
7.4.1.2. Sequence of Tenses in Adverbial Clauses of Manner Proper 111
7.4.1.3. Non-finite forms 111
7.4.2. Adverbial Clauses of Quantity, Degree, Approximation 112
7.4.2.1. Introductory elements 112
7.4.2.2. Sequence of Tenses in Adverbial Clauses of Quantity 113
7.5. The Adverbial Clause of Comparison 113
7.5.1. Introductory elements 113
7.5.2. Sequence of Tenses in Adverbial Clauses of Comparison 114
7.5.3. Non-finite forms 114
7.6. The Adverbial Clause of Compariosn and Concession 114
7.6.1. Introductory elements 114
7.6.2. Mood Constraints in Adverbial Clauses of Comparison and Concession 115
7.6.3. Non-finite forms 116
7.7. The Adverbial Clause of Cause/Reason 116
7.7.1. Introductory elements 116
7.7.2. Sequence of Tenses in Adverbial Clauses of Reason 117
7.7.3. Non-finite forms 117
7.8. The Adverbial Clause of Concession 118
7.8.1. Introductory elements 118
7.8.2. Tense and Mood Constraints in Adverbial Clauses of Concession 120

7.8.3. Non-finite forms 122
7.9. The Adverbial Clause of Purpose 123
7.9.1. Clauses of Affirmative Purpose 123
7.9.1.1. Introductory elements 123
7.9.1.2. Tense and Mood Constraints in Affirmative Purpose Clauses 123
7.9.2. Clauses of Negative Purpose 124
7.9.2.1. Introductory elements 124
7.9.2.2. Tense and Mood Constraints in Negative Purpose Clauses 125
7.9.2.3. Non-finite forms 125
7.9.3. Purpose Clauses across registers 127
7.10. The Adverbial Clause of Result 128
7.10.1. Introductory elements 128
7.10.2. The use of Tenses in Adverbial Clauses of Result 129
7.10.3. Non-finite forms 130
7.11. The Adverbial Clause of Condition 131
7.11.1. Introductory elements 131
7.11.2. Types of Conditional Sentences. Characteristics 132
7.11.3. Special Constructions in Conditional Sentences 139
7.11.4. Non-finite forms 142
7.11.5. Frequency of Clauses of Condition across registers 143
7.12. The Adverbial Clause of Exception 144
7.13. The Adverbial Clause of Relation 145

Chapter 8 Direct and Indirect Speech 146
8.1. Pronoun changes 147
8.2. Verb changes 148
8.3. Syntactic changes 153
8.3.1. Declarative sentences 153
8.3.2. Interrogative sentences 155
8.3.3. Imperative sentences 156
8.3.4. Exclamatory sentences 158

8.4. Free Indirect Speech 159

Chapter 9 Pro-forms 160
9.1. Pro-forms for noun phrases 160
9.2. Pro-forms for adverbials (Pro-adverbials) 161
9.3. Pro-forms for predicates and predication (Pro-verbs) 162
9.4. Pro-forms for clauses 164

PART II
A MULTIPLE APPROACH TO SYNTAX 167

Chapter 1 Syntactic Analysis of Multi-Word Units 169
1.1. Multi-word units 169
1.2. Idioms 169
1.2.1. Defining idioms 169
1.2.2. Syntactic and semantic analysis of idioms 170
1.2.3. Functional idioms 172
1.3. Collocations 173
1.4. Lexical bundles 176
1.4.1. Defining lexical bundles 176
1.4.2. Structural aspects of lexical bundles 177
1.4.3. Lexical bundles in various registers 178
1.4.4. Lexical bundles and idioms 179

Chapter 2 Syntax-Semantics Interface 183
2.1. The sentence – sense and reference 183
2.2. Pronouns and co-referentiality 185
2.3. Kinds of rules violation 186
2.3.1. Anomaly 186
2.3.2. Metaphor 187
2.3.3. Idioms 189
2.3.4. Dead metaphors and idioms 195
2.4. Leech's view on syntax and semantics relation 197

2.5. Generative semantics vs. Interpretive semantics 199
2.6. Meaning and grammar from the cognitive perspective 204

Chapter 3 Syntax-Pragmatics Interface 207
3.1. Introduction 207
3.2. Grammar (and syntax) vs. pragmatics 208
3.2.1. Sentence and clause 208
3.2.2. Complex sentences and speech acts 211
3.2.3. Compound sentences. Coordination, subordination and pragmatics 212
3.2.4. Complex sentences. Clause ordering and role 220
3.3. Theories of syntax implying pragmatic features 221
3.3.1. Lexical-functional grammar 221
3.3.2. Cognitive grammar 222
3.3.3. Construction grammar 224
3.3.4. Functional grammar 224
3.4. New interdisciplinary directions of study 224
3.4.1. Event semantics 224
3.4.2. Modality 226

List of Authors 227

Bibliography 229