

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	9
CHAPTER I
FROM (POLITICAL) VIOLENCE TO TERRORISM: AN INTELLECTUAL JOURNEY	17
Introduction.....	17
1.1. Conceptualising the Meanings of Violence.....	18
1.2. A Typology of Violence.....	23
1.3. Political Violence: for or against?.....	25
1.4. Violence, Culture and Subjectivity.....	30
1.5. Political Violence and Its Extreme Form: Terrorism.....	31
1.5.1. The Semantics and Ideology of Political Terrorism... ..	33
1.5.2. What’s in a Name? The Etymology of “Terror(ism)”	34
1.5.3. Terrorism in a Context: The First Occurrence of the
Term.....	35
1.5.4. Defining Terrorism: A Hopeless Task?.....	37
1.5.5. Narratives of Terror(ism) : Official, Oppositional,
Alternative.....	42
1.5.6. A Historical Approach to Terrorist Violence.....	44
1.5.7. Root Causes of Terrorism: from Stereotype to Reality	47
1.5.8. Towards a Typology of Terrorism	51
1.5.9. Terrorist (Group) Profiling.....	57
1.5.10. New Rules for an Old Game: Postmodern
Terrorism.....	60
CHAPTER II
THE THEATRE OF TERROR: WESTERN CULTURE AND TERRORIST VIOLENCE	66
Introduction.....	66
2.1. The Rhetorical Dimension of Terrorist Acts.....	67
2.2. The Mass Media Discourse on Terrorist Violence.....	69
2.2.1. The Impact of the Mass Media on Social Life.....	69
2.2.2. Fascination of (Terrorist) Violence	70
2.2.3. Terrorism and the Mass Media.....	71
2.2.4. September Eleventh and Its Media Impact.....	73
U.S. Front Page Analysis	75
British Front Page Analysis.....	81
2.3. The Academic Discourse on Terrorist Practices.....	84
2. 4. The Foundations of Political Discourses on Terrorist
Violence.....	89

2.5. The Other's Discourse on Terrorist Violence.....	93
2.6. The Figurative Dimension of Terrorist Violence: Literary Approaches.....	94

CHAPTER III

THE TERRORIST AS THE WRITER'S DOUBLE/RIVAL: PAUL AUSTER'S LEVIATHAN AND DON DELILLO'S MAO II.....	98
Introduction.....	98
3.1. The Terrorist as the Writer's Double.....	99
3.1. 1. Prefigurations: The Novelist-Terrorist Relation in Henry James's The Princess Casamassima	100
3.1.1.1. The 'Great Metaphor' for Late Victorian England: Anarchism and Its Representation in The Princess Casamassima	102
3.1.1.2. The Terrorist as the Artist's Double: Henry James's Hyacinth Robinson.....	112
3. 2. Paul Auster's Leviathan and the Phantom of Liberty.....	120
3.2.1. Political Symbolism: Representations of New-Left Terrorist Ideology and Acts in Leviathan	124
3.2.2. Benjamin Sachs: From the Novelist to the Terrorist	130
3.3. Mao II or the Status of the Novelist -Terrorist Relation in Postmodern Culture.....	135
3.3.1. The Status of the Writer in the Postmodern Society of Mao II	135
3.3.2. From Maoism to Fundamentalism.....	139
3.3.3. The Twentieth-Century Novelist and Terrorist: between Rivalry and Affinity.....	141

CHAPTER IV

FROM 'PROPAGANDA BY THE DEED' TO 'MASS-MEDIATED' TERRORISM: DORIS LESSING'S THE GOOD TERRORIST AND DON DELILLO'S MAO II	150
Introduction.....	150
4.1. Traditions of Terrorism Publicity: 'Propaganda by the Deed'.....	152
4.1.1. A Literary Representation of the Nineteenth-Century Philosophy of the Bomb: Joseph Conrad's The Secret Agent	155
4.1.1.1. Joseph Conrad's Anarchists: From Sham Revolutionism to Nihilism.....	164
4.2. Twentieth-Century 'Mass-Mediated' Terrorist Violence: Doris Lessing's The Good Terrorist and Don DeLillo's Mao II	173
4.2.1. England, Communism and The Good Terrorist	174
4.2.1.1. Leftist Rhetoric and Terrorist Identity in The Good Terrorist	179
4.2.1.2. Terrorism for Publicity: Leftist Terrorism

and Media Coverage in The Good Terrorist	182
4.2.2. Mao II and ‘Mass-Mediated’ Terrorism.....	185

CHAPTER V

THE 9/11 NOVEL IN AMERICAN AND BRITISH LITERATURES: DON DELILLO’S FALLING MAN AND IAN MCEWAN’S SATURDAY	192
Introduction.....	192
5.1. From Fact (Event) to Fiction (Narrative): 9/11 and 7/7.....	193
5.2. A Response from the ‘Usual Suspects’	195
5.3. How (American or British) Individuals Cope with 9/11: Falling Man and Saturday	198
5.3.1. Post 9/11 America in Don DeLillo’s Falling Man ...	198
5.3.2. Post 9/11 Britain in Ian McEwan’s Saturday	202
5.4. From the Motif of Falling to the Motif of the Plane on Fire.....	207
5.4.1. The ‘Falling’ Taboo.....	207
5.4.2. The Plane on Fire Motif.....	209
5.5. Self vs. Other.....	212
5.5.1. How the West Sees the ‘Other’	212
5.5.2. How the ‘Other’ Sees the West.....	216
5.6. The ‘Others’ Populating America and Britain.....	221
CONCLUSION	225
BIBLIOGRAPHY	229