

Table of contents

ARGUMENT	9
INTRODUCTION	11
Chapter 1. “Water, water, every where”	25
1.1. Water as culture.....	26
1.2. Water as space.....	62
1.3. Water as atopia.....	72
1.4. Water as image.....	81
Chapter 2. “And all the air is filled with pleasant noise of waters”. William Wordsworth	108
2.1. A humid vision of death.....	126
2.2. “A huge sea of mist”.....	135
2.3. The “ocean’s shipless flood”.....	141
2.4. “The skirts of the blind vapour”.....	145
2.5. “My life became a floating island”.....	149
2.6. “Like one who rows”.....	154
2.7. “The solitude of the vast sea”.....	160
2.8. Locus amoenus	165
2.9. “Like a sea-beast”.....	176

2.10. Pond-ing.....	180
2.11. “There is a sympathy in streams”.....	185
2.12. Insularity and fluid culture.....	191

Chapter 3. “Snatched at the Foam, as the Wave passed by me”. Samuel Taylor Coleridge..... 199

3.1. Early rivers.....	200
3.2. Women and water.....	203
3.3. “Dear Gutter”.....	210
3.4. Wordsworth and fluidity.....	214
3.5. Germanize / German-ice.....	219
3.6. Rivers and lakes	227
3.7. “Moon to the Ocean”.....	234
3.8. Asra and the Imagination.....	238
3.9. Cataracts and language.....	245
3.10. Fluids in Malta.....	248
3.11. Dark moments, cleansing water.....	254
3.12. Fluid bird.....	257
3.13. “The small water-insect”.....	258
3.14. Ice-ification of the soul	263
3.15. “Swimming book”.....	287
3.16. “The pool becomes a mirror”.....	292

3.17. “Silent with swimming sense”	302
Conclusion. Semiotics of fluidity	309
Bibliography	317

